IMPROVED SANITATION

New and Improved Methods Advocated by the State Board of Health for Kentucky.

The Kentucky State Board of Health at a meeting held in Louisville recently adopted a new set of rules, looking to the betterment of the sanitary conditions of the State. These rules go into effect at once and will be enforced by the State Bacteriologist and his assistants. Following are the new rules adopted:

1. No municipality, corporation or person shall install or enter into contract for installing any public water supply or system of sewerage until complete plans and specifications fully describing such water supply or system of sewerage have been submitted to and received the approval of the State Board of Health.

2. No municipality, corporation or person shall make or enter into contract for making any additions or alterations in any public water supply which involve a change in the source of supply or a change in methods of treating the water for purification purposes until complete plans and specifications fully describing such alterations and additions or alterations have been submitted to and received the approval of the State Board of Health.

3. No corporation, institution, or person, shall adopt a site for the location of any manufacturing, or other industry which produces putrescible or otherwise objectionable liquid wastes, until said site is approved by the State Board of Health, or unless some method for adequately purifying such wastes, satisfactory to the Board of Health, is to be used.

FORTY-EIGHTH ANNUAL EXHIBITION

Of The Washington County Fair Promises To Be a Successful One.

The forty-eighth annual exhibition of the Washington County Fair began to-day under the most auspicious circumstances. A large crowd in attendance, while the exhibitions and entries in the floral hall, ladies department and produce and poultry department are numerous and of the highest class. The fair promises to be one of the best ever held here as there is a quantity of high-class stock on the grounds. We will publish the premium list next week.

DESTRUCTIVE FIRES IN NORTHWEST

The Forests of the Great Northwest a Seething Mass of Flames—The Losses Large

Forest fires in Montana are spreading rapidly and additional troops in large bodies were hurried to the scene last week to aid in fighting the flames. The devastation is almost unparalleled and the property losses enormous. Supervisor Logan, of the Glacier National Park, and Supervisors Haines and Bunker, of the Flathead and Blackfoot National Forests, respectively, reported that the old fires were practically under control, but that new ones are constantly breaking out. They requested that four companies of soldiers be sent to the Glacier park and three companies each to the Flathead and Blackfoot National Forests. Gen. Wood, chief of staff, sent orders at once for the dispatch of five companies of the Fourteenth Infantry to the points indicated. No more troops were available at that time for service in Montana or Washington.

Spokane, Wash., Aug. 22.—Hourly reports from fires in the forests of Northern Idaho and Western Montana are increasing the toll of the dead. The latest figures from Wallace are that 40 fire fighters probably have perished.

In the hills near Sand Point, Idaho, Forester Van Dyke and a crew of sixty-five are reported surrounded by flames. A woman and her daughter perished at Cabinet, Idaho. Five are known to have perished at Newport, Wash., in an attempt to reach the town.

All along the Great Northern and Northern Pacific tracks between Spokane and Helena, numberless fires are known to be raging fiercely, but definite reports cannot be secured, as the telegraph and telephone wires are all down.

Before communication with Libby, Mont., ended it was reported that every male resident of the town was working with 200 paid fire fighters to divert Flower creek to the south side of the village, as a protection against the fire arising up from that direction.

BIDDING FOR CONVICT LABOR

Bidding for the Labor of State Convicts at Frankfort Has Been Inaugurated.

Frankfort, Ky., Aug. 18.—At a meeting of the Penitentiary board to be held here Monday the bids for the work of 400 convicts in the Frankfort penitentiary will be gone over finally and the contract may be awarded at that time. The bids were put in several ways and each bidder had several propositions, so that it was a difficult matter to understand, without study, how much each bidder had actually bid. The bids, as figured up, were:

A. D. Martin, 70 cents for 250 men, and 65 cents for 150 men, making 71½¢ for the 400 men.

Reliance Manufacturing Company, of Chicago, 67½¢ for 400 men.

Kuhn Panta Company, 57½¢ for one hundred and fifty men.

Hoge-Montgomery Co., of Frankfort, 46¢ for 400 men.

SUDDEN DEATH OF W. P. MONTGOMERY

Well Known and Highly Respected Citizen of Washington County Passes Away.

The people of this county and especially those of this community, were profoundly shocked to hear of the death of W. P. Montgomery, which occurred at his home Monday afternoon at 4 o'clock. Mr. Montgomery was not only a man of advanced years, being 77 years of age, but for some time had been in bad health. His death was caused by acute indigestion.

Mr. Montgomery was known and liked by the people of this community in which he was born and where he had spent all his life. He was a man with many admirable traits of character and his familiar figure and courteous manner will be greatly missed by all who knew and admired him. Mr. Montgomery raised one of the best families ever raised in this county and besides his wife he is survived by the following children: Thomas Montgomery, Chas. Montgomery, Sam Montgomery, Mrs. Kent Smith, Mrs. A. B. Rudd, and Miss Sallie Montgomery, of this county, and Brother Christopher, a member of the Xaverian order, of Baltimore.

The funeral services were conducted this morning at St. Rose and attended by a large concourse of friends. The remains were later interred in St. Dominic's cemetery.

Miss Mary Brown, the thirteen year old daughter of Mr. W. E. Brown, died at the home of her father near Valley Hill yesterday afternoon after a month's illness of typhoid fever. The funeral was conducted this morning at Williamsburg. No girl in the community was brighter or more popular than the deceased, and her death is mourned by all who knew her, as her bright face and attractive manner will be missed in the community in which she lived and where she helped to make the world better and happier.

A sad death occurred this morning when Catherine, the three year old child of Mr. and Mrs. W. P. Kelly, died of scarlet fever and meningitis. The children of Mr. Kelly have for some weeks been suffering from scarlet fever, but the others had recovered. To the parents of the little girl we extend our sincere sympathy.

THE BOY'S HOME RIGHTS

Treat Your Boy as a Member of the Family—Allow Him Every Consistent Privilege.

"Grant the boy the privilege of having his friends to meals as often as you can conveniently arrange for it," says Christine Terhune Herriken in Woman's Home Companion for September. "Perhaps you are among those fortunate ones who have a large family with a big table where the addition of an extra plate counts for little. If such is the case, your way is simple. Should there be several sons to plan for, consider a system of rotation that each may have his guests in a fair ratio. If your family is small so that it is desirable to have a little notice in advance, before adding another hearty boy's appetite to those you have reckoned for, fix on a certain time when your boy may ask a friend in to dinner or supper. Boys are delightfully unselfish creatures, bless their hearts! Give them a cordial welcome and plenty of food, and they will never miss trifles of serving.

"Study other compensations for the absence from natural racketing; you are obliged to demand from your boy while he is at home. Provide him chances to let off steam elsewhere, in places intended for just such relaxations. Send him out into the open on holidays and give him the means of pursuing any athletic sport which attracts him. Be sure that there is a good playground connected with the school he attends. Encourage him to work in the gymnasium.

"All the compensation you offer the boy need not be limited to the possession of a pleasant room and the other privileges I have mentioned. Don't forget that when he displays the consideration demanded of him in a well-regulated family he is putting a restraint upon himself you can hardly understand, no matter how close you sympathize with him. Many comments have been made upon the wonderful self-control displayed by the child who submits without protest to a prohibition or grants prompt obedience to a command beyond his comprehension. Largely a matter of habit, possibly, but there is a great deal of thought going on inside that small head and, often than we imagine, we parents are being healed before a child's mental judgment seat and condemned unreservedly or with a recommendation to mercy."

ANNEXATION FAVORED BY CANADIAN

A Nationalist Leader in the Dominion of Canada Says They Should Join Uncle Sam.

Antigonish, N. S., Aug. 19.—Annexation of Canada to the United States by Canada was advocated to-day in an address by Henri Bourassa, M. P., the Nationalist leader of Quebec, before the summer school of sciences of St. Francis Xavier college. The speaker dealt at length with the four possible destinies of Canada, namely:

1. Remaining in the position in which he is at present, which he regarded as very improbable.

2. Imperial federation, which would be an unwieldy and unworkable condition.

3. Annexation to the United States, a Independence.

"Imperial federation means an imperial council, with a preponderant British influence," said Mr. Bourassa. "Conditions to day in Canada make for annexation rather than for imperial federation. The penetrative influence of trade by rail and coastal lines, the mental propensities of the two peoples living under the same or similar conditions, industrial and social, the constant intercommunication of Canadians and Americans, are all powerful factors making for annexation."

KENTUCKY WOMEN'S MODEL SCHOOL

A Model Rural School Will Be Erected and Maintained by Them at the State Fair.

The people of Kentucky have grown to look upon their annual State Fair as one of the greatest educational institutions in the Commonwealth. Many evidences of practical development and enlargement along live stock and agricultural lines are traceable directly to these annual exhibitions. A departure specifically along educational channels will be made at the approaching eighth annual State Fair, to be held in Louisville in September.

A model school building will be erected and maintained, and the enterprise is being fostered and carried out by the women of Kentucky. This important work is in the hands of the Ladies' Auxiliary advisory board. The speaker dealt at length with the four possible destinies of Canada, namely:

1. Remaining in the position in which he is at present, which he regarded as very improbable.

2. Imperial federation, which would be an unwieldy and unworkable condition.

3. Annexation to the United States, a Independence.

"Imperial federation means an imperial council, with a preponderant British influence," said Mr. Bourassa. "Conditions to day in Canada make for annexation rather than for imperial federation. The penetrative influence of trade by rail and coastal lines, the mental propensities of the two peoples living under the same or similar conditions, industrial and social, the constant intercommunication of Canadians and Americans, are all powerful factors making for annexation."

be surrounded by a model school yard. Not a detail is to be overlooked, even to an exhibit of the school wagons now effectively used in many localities where "the model idea" has taken root. Prof. Hogenstein will be the host in chief in charge of the building during the Fair week.—Ex.

CEMETERY OF ST. ROSE

Father McGonigle, Prior of St. Rose, Endeavoring to Raise Funds to Have the Grounds Put in Good Order.

Father McGonigle, prior of St. Rose, requests that not only each family in the congregation, but far and near, who have friends buried in the cemetery, donate at least $1.50 towards cleaning it up. With the expenditure of about $1,000 St. Rose cemetery can be made the most beautiful spot in Washington county. Naturally it is beautifully situated and if once graded and put in order it can be kept so by a very small tax from year to year. No doubt, to many, $1,000 looks like a very large sum of money to raise, but if each family that has members resting there would donate from $5.00 to $10.00, the amount would soon be realized and the donation would not only be given in a noble cause, but in the fulfillment of a pious duty to the departed ones, to the priests of St. Rose, to the community, and to themselves. If the old cemetery is once beautified, as it can and should be, the people can then look upon it with that same feeling of pride that they must have when they enter the grand old church.

The people of St. Rose are never apologetic in vain. True, "What is everybody's business is nobody's business" and for this reason things of importance are sometimes carelessly neglected, but when someone takes the lead, all follow with a willing and ready response. Father McGonigle has now gone to work to have the cemetery beautified, but without the co-operation of those who have friends buried there and to whose interest the beauty of the place belongs the work will fall through; but if all unite and do their part towards the work, by donating a small sum of money, the cemetery will soon be in keeping with the church and will not only be the pride of the community but of the county as well.

DELIGHTFUL MUSICAL

And Porch Party Last Thursday Afternoon—Miss Roberts Entertains Her Friends.

Miss Elizabeth Roberts entertained a number of her friends at a delightful musical and porch party last Thursday afternoon from four to six o'clock, the occasion being in the nature of a farewell gathering of her most intimate friends at her home before leaving this week for Lakspur, Colorado, where she expects to remain a long time with her brother, Charles Roberts, who has a lucrative position there.

Miss Roberts is one of the brightest and most interesting of Springfield's younger set, with the added attractions of popularity and charm among her numerous friends, who will sorely miss her in many ways. She has been quite frequently entertained since the news of her imminent departure has spread among her friends. Miss Stella Simms entertained her in the good old Kentucky "pend day" style on Wednesday; on Thursday she herself entertained at the musical and porch party; on Sunday she was entertained to a matinee musicale at Miss Sue Ray's, and to a dinner and musicale at Miss Ray's on Wednesday night; on Tuesday night she was with Miss Louise McElroy to dinner and later was entertained by Miss Pearl Connor at a chafing dish supper in the Connor home.

While so many of her friends are distressed at her departure for such a long time, they all cordially wish her a very happy stay in Colorado, and look forward with eagerness to her return visit home next summer, with the hope that she will decide to remain here instead of going back to Colorado.

ATTENTION, FARM BOYS

A Prize of $100 Offered to the Farm Boy Who Shows the Best Judgment of Stock.

Commissioner of Agriculture, M. C. Rankin, has offered a prize of $100 to the farm boy who shows the best judgment in scoring live stock at the State Fair. A number of farm boys have entered this contest, and it is anticipated that about ten or fifteen farm boys will contest for the prize. The boys should be from 16 to 18 years old, and have a good common school education to enter the shorter courses at the College and be a graduate of a high school to enter the four year course in agriculture. The prize money must be used in defraying expenses while taking one of the educational courses of study. The contest will not be difficult and every farm boy in the State should write to Secretary J. W. Newman, State Fair Louisville, for entry blanks. It costs nothing to enter the contest.

KENTUCKY GLEANINGS

WHAT IS GOING ON IN THE DIFFERENT SECTIONS OF THE COMMONWEALTH

JUDGE DIES SUDDENLY.

Prominent Official Found Dead in Chicken Yard By Gardener.

Stanford, Mich. Christian Sauley, Judge of the Thirteenth Judicial district, died suddenly at his home near here. He went to feed his chickens, and soon afterward his gardener found the body of the Judge prone upon the ground.

Judge Sauley was in his 58th year, having been born in Monticello, Wayne county, in 1832. He was elected county judge of Lincoln county in 1870, and served till 1874. In 1880 he was a member of the electoral college from the Nollis river in the southern part of Hancock. In 1888 he was appointed by President Grover Cleveland associate justice of the supreme court of Wyoming, and remained there until that territory became a state.

Besides his wife, Judge Sauley is survived by six children out of eight whom he reared. The body of Judge M. C. Sauley was laid to rest in Buffalo cemetery. Services were held at his home by Rev. Joseph Ballou, former confederate, and Dr. E. M. Green, of Danville, Lincoln county's new courthouse is draped completely in black in honor of the dead judge.

TRY TO BREAK JAIL.

Four Men Accused of Murder Nearly Gain Liberty.

Cattletown, Ky.—A desperate attempt was made by the prisoners in the Boyd county jail to make their escape. While Jailer Debord was at attending a coroner's inquest several of the prisoners succeeded in prying loose some heavy iron bars, and by using them as levers had displaced some of the lighter bars between their cells and the day hall until they had a hole almost large enough to have permitted their easy escape. They heard the noise and Jailer Debord, Police man Tom Salzer, of this city; Chief John VanHarold, of Guyandotte, and John VanHorn, a Baldwin detective, who happened to be present, ran to the jail and confronted the men with drawn pistols and drove them back. There are four men being held in jail without bond, charged with murder, besides several other desperate men. Bob Harwood, charged with the murder of Policeman Frank, of Ashland, was on another floor from where the attempt to break jail occurred Sunday night in it. The jail is said to be one of the most secure in the state.

ELECTION BOARD TO MEET.

Will Name County Election Commissioners August 25.

Frankfort, Ky.—Napier Adams, clerk of the court of appeals and chairman of the state election commission, has called a meeting of the state board of election commissioners, comprising Judge C. R. McDowell, of Danville, Democrat; John T. Shelby, of Lexington, Republican, to meet here August 25 to appoint the county election commissioners. Adams only acts as referee in case of a disagreement. Adolph Wells, secretary of the commission, has addressed a letter to the chairman of the state central and executive committees, both Democratic and Republican, requesting the typewritten list of names he sent to the state commission from which to make their appointments.

Three men may be recommended by each party from each county from which to select the county commissioners.

CLAIMS BLOODY CLOTHING.

Wendling Then Refused to Talk Upon Advice of Attorney.

Louisville—Joseph Wendling, indicted on the charge of murdering Alma Kellner, is now in the Jefferson county jail, awaiting trial at the October term. Upon his arrival here Wendling was taken to the office of Col. H. Watson Lindsey, chief of police, and there shown the bloody clothing which is supposed to have been worn when the murder of which he is accused, was committed. Wendling identified several of the articles as having belonged to him, but when his attorney, J. Reginald Clements, arrived he advised his client not to talk any further to the police. This sealed the lips of the prisoner.

EAGLE SCARES MOTHERS.

Glasgow, Ky.—The anxious mothers of Glasgow were startled by a large eagle which visited in that neighborhood and which made several attempts to carry off a small child. About the same hour every day the bird swooped down near some home, seemingly looking for something to eat, and owing to its immense size could easily carry off a small child. It is believed to have carried off several lambs and pigs.

BANKERS FAVOR INSPECTION.

Plan of Secretary of State Bruner is Approved.

At a meeting of the bankers of the Eighth district, at Lawrenceburg, resolutions were adopted declaring in favor of the plan for bank inspection which has been determined upon by Dr. Ben L. Bruner, secretary of state. The bankers all thought inspection of the state banks would be a good thing for the banks and the fact that the banks will be inspected voluntarily will do much to hold confidence of the depositors. But only a few banks have shown any disinclination to be inspected and the great majority like the plan proposed by Dr. Bruner. He is sending out circular letters explaining the system of bank inspection and the contract which is to be signed by the banks agreeing to pay the cost of inspection of their institutions. These will be made public later so that the public will know what the bank inspection is and what it means.

The Commonwealth

Elizabethtown.—William Purcell, a farmer, was accidentally drowned in the Nollis river in the southern part of the county, near Webb's mill. He was in bathing at the time and got beyond his depth.

The will of John G. Carlisle was filed for probate in Washington. William J. Kehoe is named as executor and the estate is to be divided between three grandchildren. It is estimated to be worth about $50,000.

Bedford.—E. King had 22 acres of wheat which turned out more than 40 bushels per acre. The wheat crop in Trimble is good this year. The average will be over 20 bushels. Oats yield about 30 bushels. Corn in good condition.

Milton.—The big peach crop of Trimble county is now being packed and shipped to market at the rate of from 3,000 to 4,000 bushels a day. Much if the fruit weighs from seven to nine ounces and is bringing from $1.50 to $2.50 per bushel.

Russellville.—Miss Mattie Hardy, of this county, died in the Western Kentucky Lunatic Asylum at Hopkinsville, and the remains brought here for burial. She was buried at the Hardy burying ground near Walnut Grove church.

Lexington.—Morris Breunon, the 15-year-old son of L. W. Breunon, a farmer living on New Columbia, Ill., fell into a thresher and was so badly injured that he died shortly afterward. The boy's left leg was ground to a pulp to the knee and he never rallied from the shock.

Lexington.—The official board of the National Fox Hunters association held a meeting at the Phoenix Hotel and decided to hold their annual fox hunt this year at Crab Orchard, ending November 18. The hunt will begin the Monday following. The hunt will last a week.

Milton.—The reunion of the Fourth Kentucky confederate soldiers will be held here Thursday, September 25, for one day only. William Crab, of Eminence, is president and William Turner, of Station Station, secretary of the association. Dr. L. G. Conter has charge of local affairs, aided by the Commercial club.

Cattletown.—The body of a newly dressed woman, about 35 years of age, was found in the Ohio river. A rope was attached around the body. The police authorities of Huntington, W. Va., stated that the body was that of Mrs. Henry Hall, who disappeared a week ago, having with her $415. There was no money found on the body.

Owensboro.—As the water in the recent flood leave the fields of Davies county millions of fish are being caught by the farmers. It is said that Adams places the fish over the water with a shovel. Many of the fish were dead and local fish dealers experienced much trouble over the sale of spoiled fish by country residents.

Glasgow.—Frank L. Eubank, aged 85 years, of this county, died near here of disease incident to old age. He was one of the pioneer settlers of Monroe county, but removed to Harren county many years ago, where he made a large fortune in growing tobacco and corn. He is survived by one daughter, Miss Sarah Anderson Eubank.

Milton.—Arrangements have been completed for the Trimble County Farmers' institute, which will be held two days in the courthouse at Bedford, Friday and Saturday, August 26 and 27. The official program has not yet been announced, but several excellent speakers from over the state will be present, besides the local speakers.

Seymour.—Pennsylvania capitalists are negotiating for a 5,000-acre coal and timber tract on the headwaters of Cumberland river in this county. If the deal goes through it is understood that the company will open development at an early date. Thousands of acres are changing hands in that section and all things point to a great industrial awakening.

Mt. Sterling.—While moving with a machine on his farm in Clark county Jas. Peters was drenched by a team run away, throwing him in front of the knife and cutting off one of his legs and bruising him badly. He was rushed to the hospital for an operation to save his life.

Tompkinsville.—The annual reunion of the federal and confederate soldiers has just closed at Spivy, Tenn., about nine miles south of this place. Only a delegation were in an army camp from this place. The reunion will be held here next year.

Had Lost Faith In Doctors and Medicines

"I wish to thank you for the sample of Resinol Soap sent me several weeks ago," writes Mrs. M. E. Clemmer, Sunbury, Pa. "At that time my baby's face was like a raw and bleeding piece of meat. Medicine from three different physicians, besides various salves recommended by friends, all seemed to make the Eczema worse. Their another mother recommended Resinol Ointment which I procured at once, although I had no more faith in it than in the rest I had tried; but never did I spend fifty cents to better advantage. The first and second days I noticed a remarkable change, and now at the end of the third week, my pretty blue-eyed, rosy-cheeked baby is perfectly well again. I think the cure was surely something remarkable. Resinol Ointment and Soap did in three weeks what everything else failed to do in four months. My baby had been positively disfigured, all his complexion is all right again."

Resinol Ointment cures all skin troubles, from pimples to the most disfiguring eruptions and rashes. The first application stops the intense itching, burning, itching, Piles, Fungus, etc., and subdues the pain of a burn or scald instantaneously. It is sold in every leading drug store in the world.

Doll House Library.

A search for a child's short story, "The Griffin and the Minor Canon," in a volume of itself revealed to a persistent city shopper the thought and money that are expended on the furnishing of doll's houses. Book stores had not the story in a single volume, but in a department store one young woman interviewed had received it transferred from the toy department and was able to contribute a helpful hint.

"I think," she said, "you can find it in a volume of itself revealed to a persistent city shopper the thought and money that are expended on the furnishing of doll's houses. Book stores had not the story in a single volume, but in a department store one young woman interviewed had received it transferred from the toy department and was able to contribute a helpful hint."

LEG A MASS OF HUMOR

"About seven years ago a small abrasion appeared on my right leg just above my ankle. It irritated me so that I began to scratch it, and it went on from scratch to scratch, and the ankle to the knee was one solid scale like a scab. The irritation was always worse at night and would not allow me to sleep, or any other matter. I was completely undermining my health. I lost fifty pounds in weight and was almost out of my mind with pain and chagrin as to what matter the irritation came, at work, on the street or in the presence of company, I would have to scratch it until I had the blood running down into my shoe. I simply cannot describe my suffering during those seven years. The pain, mortification, loss of sleep, both to myself and wife is simply indescribable on paper and one has to experience it to know what it is."

"I tried all kinds of doctors and remedies but I might as well have thrown my money down a sewer. They would dry up for a little while and fill me with hope, but they would never do as bad if not worse. I had given up hope of ever being cured when I was induced by my wife to give the Cuticura Remedies a try. After taking the Cuticura Soap and Cuticura Ointment, the trouble had entirely disappeared and my leg was as fine as the day I was born. Now after a lapse of six months with no signs of a recurrence I feel perfectly safe in extending to you my heartfelt thanks for the good the Cuticura Remedies have done for me. I shall always recommend them to my friends. W. H. White, 640 Broad Street, Philadelphia, Pa., Feb. 4 and Apr. 13, 1909."

It is said that the Nicaraguans would rather fight than eat. But don't jump at the conclusion that this is an indication of great courage. It may mean poor cooking.

When the sun strengthens and blazes in the sky and heat becomes a factor to reckon with in dress, and everything else, military must be cool looking or it will fall to be attractive. All white or combinations of white with black, give us the crispest and best effects for the dog days. But white set off with a bit of scarlet, soft blue or leaf green is smart and effective also, and may be chosen instead of white with black.

CHARMING LINGERIE GOWN

Exceedingly Pretty Dress Eminently Suitable for Garden-Party or River Wear.

A very charming lingerie gown has a smartly cut skirt tucked down, upon which appears a row of valen-tine insertion, the insertion being continued at the top of the flounce in the same form, and appearing at intervals upon the skirt, the center immediately below the knee being beautifully embroidered. The bodice has a collar of valenciennes lace, insertions of which appear in dainty design upon the bodice and upon the long sleeves and waist belt, the center of the bodice being embroidered to match the skirt. This is an exceedingly pretty and useful model, and is eminently suitable for garden party or river wear. This model is the one illustrated above.

Effective Sofa Pillows. An effective and easily made sofa pillow for a summer home is made in oblong shape, 14 by 20 inches. The pillow is covered with plain heavy woaden lace in ceru or gray. Two inches from each end are bands of flowered cretonne three inches wide crossing the pillow. These bands are edged on both sides with narrow ceru lace applied flat.

Another variation had the body of the pillow of flowered chintz or cretonne with bands of figured ceru lace on such as is used for furniture covering. The ends of this pillow have a two-inch wide linen lace in ceru tints or those made on the "helmet" shape have captivated as many as the big drooping picture hats.

A lovely hat for the hot weather has here made of dead white chip, overlaid with black chintilly lace. A grouping of four immense roses in tulle hat silk is mounted across the front, they are almost colorless with a bluish of pale pink at the edges of some of the petals. The effect is of millinery as light as air.

A pretty sailor for practical wear is trimmed with white wings and a corset of plaid ribbon across the front. The shape is a Milan in the natural pale yellow of the finished hat. All the trimming is pure white and a crisp satin floss ribbon is chosen for making the plaiting.

A floating washable lace veil is the thing generally worn with these

There is a great deal of art in the wearing of a sash. One can increase one's height or one's breadth, adorn a plain gown, tone down an elaborate one, give a touch of distinction to one's whole appearance, simply by the way in which the sash is draped and adjusted.

Try wearing the sash in shawl style over the shoulders, caught by a stitch in back and tucked under the girdle, to fall in diagonal lengths to just above the ankles.

Or wind it twice around the waist, like a girder; cross it in front and fasten it at the knot at the sides of the skirt below the knees.

Lightning Pranks.

A fine rain fell in this county Sunday morning which was greatly needed and which will be of inestimable benefit to the tobacco growers. While the rain was a godsend, lightning on the other hand played considerable havoc. A barn on the place of "Squire J. O. Polin" was struck and burned to the ground and two fine mares and colts which were in it were also burned. The large chimney of the Walton Hotel was struck and a number of bricks knocked loose while other minor instances of damage have been reported.

Fifth Generation

Quite a remarkable little fellow made his appearance in the world August 15, when a son was born to Mr. and Mrs. Hugh Leachman, of near town. The little fellow ushered in the fifth generation of the Leachman family and also has the distinction of having seven grandmothers, viz: Mesdames J. S. Leachman, Rebecca Bishop, Tom Bishop, Lavinia Jones, and Emma Wilson, of this county, and Annie Brewer and Lizzie Williams, of Nelson county.

Gathering Them In.

James Richardson, a negro, known as "Lightning Bug," was arrested at Nobleville, Ind., a few days ago. He is said to have been the man who stabbed Carl Etherington while the latter was being dragged from the jail to the pole where he was lynched. Richardson is said to have washed his bloody hands at a hotel after Etherington was hanged.

Daring Robbery Attempted.

Sunday night about 12:30 a Mr. Freeman, of Washington county, was held up at the point of a pistol by two unknown men on Greenville street near the residence of Mrs. Julia Dalton, but he dissuaded the men from taking his money. After his escape he notified the officers and together with Messrs. William Barnes and Cecil Bohon, who saw the altercation from their window boxes, they went to the residence of Mrs. Dalton, but he could not find them in the darkness. Monday the young men had Chief Smith arrest a man, but Mr. Freeman would not say positively that he was one of his assailants and the prisoner was set at liberty.—Harrodsburg Republican.

AN EXTINCT LABOR ASSET

The Old-Time, Industrious, Painstaking and Reliable Farm Hand Has Passed Away.

In every section of the country the most difficult problem which farmers still have to deal with is "help," not only in times like the present, when there is plenty of employment in other callings, but, even in hard times, when work and wages are very hard to find in the cities and large villages. Labor-saving machinery enables the farmer of today to do two or three times as much as a man could do fifty years ago, but even with this advantage there is a lack of farm labor, and it is only the farmer who can do all the work himself that is really independent. It is not a matter of wages. There are thousands and tens of thousands of city workmen who do not earn as much as the farmers would gladly pay for their services. Neither is it a matter of the cost of living, for a man can live in the country much cheaper than he can in the city. Nor is it a matter of health. The explanation is in the fact that the fascinations of city life are so powerful that they overcome all adverse considerations and crowd the cities with unemployed labor, which is badly needed on the farms.

The hired man of the olden time can no longer be found in the agricultural districts. He was one of the best of institutions. He knew his business. He made his employer's interest his own. In many cases he was a fixture upon the farm and lived and died there. I remember several of that kind in the neighborhood in Massachusetts, where I was reared. In most cases such a hired man, quiet, industrious, honest, really intelligent, felt that he was part owner in the whole establishment. He worked from daylight till dark and was trustworthy everywhere at all times. A man that the owner of the farm could safely leave in charge when called away, even for several days. So, too, he was respectable and respected. If he was young and ambitious when he began, he saved money little by little, married the "hired girl" or a farmer's daughter, bought a farm for himself and raised a family and became one of the leaders of the town.

He has become extinct and there is none to take his place, because his sons "would rather starve in the city than have plenty in the country," and here is one of the main obstacles in the way of extensive farming. No man can do business successfully with poor help.

Woman's Home Companion for September

Women are planning their fall wardrobe now and rejuvenating their houses, and the beautiful September issue of the Woman's Home Companion comes to us in the nick of time. Miss Gould, the Fashion Editor, shows all the points of the autumn styles, and a new department, "Home Decoration and Handicraft," will serve as an inspiration for the home lover.

In this issue begins an unusually thrilling story of the stage by Hulbert Footner, entitled "True Love." Short Stories by Mary Hastings, Annie Hamilton Donnell, and Grace Keen, together with another installment of "Brothers Four," which is drawing to a close, complete an assortment of fiction rarely found in a magazine.

There is also a large reproduction in full color of Jessie Willcox Smith's fine painting, "Little Drops of Water," which is another of her charming series illustrating familiar verses of childhood. Mrs. Burton Harrison relates, in a charming manner, her reminiscences of the famous men and women who have gathered in her drawing room. "Taking Royalty By Storm," by Amy Sutton Reynolds, is a fascinating and vivid account of the Roosevelt's tour in Europe.

Importation of Wild Animals

THE return of Colonel Roosevelt and party from Africa, with the cargo of animal specimens which had been killed during their invasion of the jungle, caused a New York dealer in wild beasts to talk interestingly of the business in which his firm is engaged. There are nearly a dozen firms in New York city that carry on an immense business in the transportation of animals fresh from the jungle. And this business, of course, does not include such famous foreign animal firms as the Hagenbecks. It is a paying business, as indeed, are all businesses where the demand exceeds the supply. The demand for wild beasts is far greater than the supply, and as a consequence prices are good, and the dealers men of wealth. The extent of this demand may be appreciated when one considers that most of the great cities in the United States have zoological parks or menageries, and that the animals are constantly being purchased by them. Then there are private collectors and circuses and the like, that are ever ready to pay the highest prices for desirable animals. The animal dealer who could secure and bring to this country three or four gorillas would make a small fortune. But no dealer has ever succeeded in doing this. The gorillas die in a few weeks in captivity; they could not stand an ocean trip for a day.

A rusty old German liner lumbers noisily into Quarantine, and then lies motionless on the tide. An officer, with broad, red, bewhiskered face, stands at the head of the companion ladder, and he smiles a peculiar smile, as a bulky screaming ululation rises from below. "The animals are getting hungry," he explains; "you know we have several hundred of them on the 'teen decks. Want to see them? All right." In another minute probably the most competent animal man in the world is at our side. He is not a trainer, or even a tamer; he is more. He is a sort of animal cook, and his special business is the personal management of wild animal troops. He receives them—lions, tigers, leopards, elephants, everything else—at Hamburg, where they have been brought fresh from their native wilds, and not only superintends their shipment aboard a vessel bound for New York, but he sails with them to make sure that they arrive safely and in good health. And he is sure that if the tiger gets off on his diet and needs a nice fresh live rabbit to tone up his system, this man will be aware of the fact almost before the tiger is—and, ergo, a nice big jumping sunny is sacrificed in accordance with the precepts of wild beast materia medica. Then, too, one can never tell just when the big box is going to rouse from his last gorge; when he does he wants a toothsome young goat, and he wants it quick. It is the part of the animal man's duties to anticipate the boat's appetite with all possible expedition.

He is a quiet, unassuming man, with stoop shoulders and bushy whiskers, and he leads the way to the 'teen decks without a word. Perhaps the uninitiated may believe that he goes through the animal section of a freight-carrying vessel is an unimpressive experience. Well, let them try it and see! This can be said at the outset—it is somewhat different from a menagerie. It means something to come into close proximity to a hundred and odd wild animals that have been ruthlessly snatched from their lairs in Africa or Asia, or elsewhere, and clapped into little barred boxes, not as large as dog houses, and slammed in and out of dark holes in the vessels of several seas on the way to Hamburg; then finally placed in the strylin 'teen decks of a German kooker. The swinging cross seas of the North Atlantic have not improved their tempers, or their nervous systems, and the visitor at Quarantine is quickly impressed with that fact. The howls and whines and the barkes come abruptly from a four feet away. For they bring the smell of land, and the great beasts sniff inquiringly, and hungrily, too.

The cages lined both sides of the gloomy space, with a little passageway between the boxes. Perhaps this passageway was three feet wide, and sometimes three deep. In the bottom cage, for instance, was a tiger; in the next above a smaller animal, a leopard or a lynx, and above that a parrot, or a bunch of neerkats. "Think of it! A three-foot passageway, with ferocious animals stretching along for 100 feet! Talk about nightmares! The reporter's hair stiffened out like so many pieces of wire, and he wished most fervently that he had not come. It was more agreeable, he felt, to see these agitated menageries where the cages are ample and the bars an inch thick.

"Better keep in the middle of the aisle," says one of the animal men; "these fellows sometimes reach out for you."

Words such as these, of course, hardly tended to reassure.

It really was too dark to see much. One caught a view of the cages stretching away in gloomy perspective until lost in the darkness, of rows of glowing green eyes and great teeth with the black of red tongue writhing between. A sailor switched the reporter with his tail and he turned, only to jump almost out of his skin as an elephant touched him on the other shoulder with his trunk. He was hardly over his scare when, zip! a leopard leaped out after his coat tail.

In one way this lower deck section was a good place to visit; the joy and relief in being able to leave it furnished the biggest and most absorbing sensations that this monotonous world has held for the reporter in the last few months at least.

Cartels & Co. are the largest dealers in wild beasts in this country.

"A large wild animal dealer," said our informant, "imports considerably more than a hundred large wild animals each year. For instance, our record for one year which I happen to have at hand, shows that we imported in that period 20 elephants, 35 camels, 20 tigers, 4 lions, 40 leopards, 20 pumas, 18 panthers and hundreds of birds and monkeys and small things. Cubs—lion and tiger and bear cubs—are in special demand by wealthy families. They are reared and petted like kittens, and in the end they outgrow their playfulness and the families who bought them from us are only too willing to pay us to come and take them away when they attain any sort of growth. We have received many orders for hippopotami, but the beasts are hard to capture and ninety-nine times out of a hundred they do not live through the voyage. In fact, menageries throughout the country have to depend of late years upon the progeny of the hippopotami in Central Park, New York, for specimens.

"Like all animal dealers, we maintain expert animal catchers in all parts of the world, and it is these men who fill the ships which arrive here. The Hagenbecks have two collecting stations, one in Calcutta and the other in Aden, Arabia. From this point the animal catchers go forth and spend months in the wilds, returning to the stations with their catch. We ourselves send catchers direct from this country—at present, we have men in South America, on the hot sands of Africa, in the Himalayas, and elsewhere, filling our orders. One of them was recently in Arabia on a camel hunt, two or three days he and his Indian trapping tigers, and so they are spread about in places where wild beasts abound.

"Sometimes we receive an order for a large number of elephants. We telegraph this order to our catchers in the East. The animals come to feed, and the animal catchers come to feed. Then the animal catchers are driven into the inclosure or keddah by means of fires and shouts and the firing of guns. Beaters on tame elephants then ride into the inclosure and rope the beasts, and in a short time they become accustomed to being led about. Elephants are naturally mild, and were this not the case they never could be captured, because of their great bulking strength.

"The natives also captured elephants in pits, a barbarously cruel method in which more than 50 per cent are killed by the fall. The animal catchers take tigers and lions in pits also. They dig a hole, cover it with matting and place on it a matting a dead goat. At night the lion or tiger steals from its lair, sees the goat and springs upon it. The matting, of course, gives way and down into the pit goes the roaring beast. Then the catchers run up and throw nets into the pit and the struggling animal soon becomes hopelessly entangled. Nooses are then lowered into the pit and the beast is dragged out to the cage. Six out of every ten are killed in this process. Leopards and jaguars and the smaller animals are caught in traps just as mice are caught, and monkeys are also trapped. Such great beasts as the rhinoceros and the like are not captured by the animal men, but are secured from native potentates, who give them away as a mark of special esteem or barter them for brass and other trifling but showy gewgaws.

"We take comparatively few lions from the wilds now. It is cheaper to buy them in captivity. Polar, grizzly and Russian bears also are mainly bought and sold in captivity; but other wild beasts are taken in their lairs."

FOOD IN LONDON IS CHEAPER.

"For many years," said a man who came back from a European tour the other day, according to an exchange, "I have been in the habit of getting into an argument with friends after my return about the prices of food in the best restaurants in New York and London. I have been contending that New York restaurants were putting up their prices all the time and some of my friends tried to convince me that you could get a meal cheaper at the higher priced restaurants in New York than in London.

"I determined this time to collect some real data for comparison and as a result I have kept the bills of many meals I had in London. It is my intention to duplicate the meals I had over there at some of the restaurants here, item for item. I did this with one of them the other day and demonstrated that for such a meal London is a lot cheaper than New York.

"Here is the bill for a luncheon I had at one of the most expensive hotels in London:

Hors d'oeuvre	varies	8	8
Plate of sweetbread		3	0
Asparagus		3	0
Cheese (Neuchâtel)		0	6
Coffee		0	6
Totals		6	8

"Now, my shirtless asparagus at $1.85 to the pound is $1.65. As for the dishes themselves they could have been surpassed anywhere. For the hors d'oeuvre I had a dozen different dishes to select from.

"Did you ever find hors d'oeuvre varies on the bill of fare of a New York restaurant? Try it. Of course you may get them at a table d'hôte, but I mean on the carte du jour of a restaurant where you pay separately for each thing you eat.

"In Paris there is a restaurant in the Avenue de l'Opera, where you can have about twenty different varieties of little fish and cold salads and appetizers for about 15 or 16 cents. It took me a long time to find this in a first-class house here, and then when I did so it was in a restaurant which is not usually considered among the most expensive in the city. Here hors d'oeuvre varies masqueraded under the title of 'buffet russe.' They charged me 50 cents for it, as against the 15 charged in the London restaurant.

"My plate of sweetbreads tasted exactly like that I had in London and cost exactly the same, 50 cents. I ordered some asparagus. On the bill of fare they had asparagus with Hollandaise sauce for 40 cents, but I wanted it cold, with French dressing. They did not tell me it would be any more, but for it they charged me 70 cents. For the Neuchâtel cheese they charged 20 cents and for the coffee 15. The robbery came on the beer.

"In London if you want a little pitcher of beer they serve you an excellent brew of Pilsener or Wurzbacher in a little sealed vessel holding a pint for a shilling. I asked the waiter to bring me a small pitcher of beer on draught, knowing they did not serve the beer as in London. He brought me a pitcher and charged me 70 cents for it.

"Now my bill came to $2.65, or exactly 11 more than the same food and drink had cost me in London. I gave the New York waiter a quarter and he scarcely nodded. I gave the London waiter six pence and he thanked me so that I could hear him."

MY DUKE CANADA

Duke of Connaught Likely to Be Governor General.

Popular Brother of the Late King Edward Reported to Be Stated for Head of the Dominion Government.

Ottawa, Can.—If the present program is adhered to the next governor general of Canada will be the Duke of Connaught, brother of the late King Edward. Such was the desire of the deceased monarch, and the probabilities are that the new King will not oppose the program. Canada appreciates the distinguished honor of having at the head of her government as the representative of the mother country so eminent a member of the royal family. Never before has one of the royal family occupied such a position, though Queen Victoria's daughter, a sister of the duke, was for years a resident of the Dominion when her husband, the Marquis of Lorne, now the Duke of Argyll, was governor general. At the same time the Canadians appreciate that society affairs at Rideau Hall, or Government House as it is sometimes called, the official residence of his excellency at Ottawa, will be upon a much grander scale than in the past, and that it will cost a pretty penny for those who try to be in the swim. Ottawa, more than ever, will become the social center.

The Duke of Connaught is the only surviving son of Queen Victoria and is 50 years old. Her majesty had nine children, of whom the eldest was Princess Victoria, mother of Emperor William; she died in 1901. The second child was the late King Edward. The Princess Alice Maud Mary, mother of the present Czarina of Russia, died in 1878. Alfred, Duke of Edinburgh died in 1900. Leopold, Duke of Albany, died in 1884. Beside the Duke of Connaught there survive Helena, Princess Christian of Schleswig-Holstein; Louise, Duchess of Argyll, and Beatrice, now Princess Henry of Battenberg.

The Duke of Connaught married Princess Louise of Prussia in 1879, and has three children. His eldest daughter is Margaret, wife of Gustav Adolphus of Sweden. His son is Prince Arthur Patrick, and his young daughter is the beautiful and decidedly independent Princess Victoria Patricia.

No princess in Europe has given such evidence of having a will of her

Restored at Last to Perfect Health by Doan's Kidney Pills.

Mrs. Narcissa Waggoner, Carterville, Ill., says: "For over ten years I suffered terribly with backaches, nervous and dizzy spells. The kidney sections were unnatural and gave me great trouble. One day I suddenly fell to the floor when I lay for a long time unconscious. Three doctors who treated me diagnosed my case as paralysis and said they could do nothing more for me. As a last resort, I began using Doan's Kidney Pills and was permanently cured. I am stronger than before in years." Remember the name—Doan's. For sale by all dealers. 50 cents a box. A New Version.

Lawyers have a peculiar system of abbreviation, such words as trustees, executors being cut down to trees, exors, and admors. This practise led to an amusing slip on the part of a solicitor, who, somewhat late in life, abandoned his profession and entered the church. A few Sundays after his ordination he started his congregation while reading the lesson by delivering one of the passages as follows: "I see men as trustees walking."

A Five-Cent Washwoman.

In Evanston, Illinois, washwomen get from $2 to $1.50 per day, and care for and from work. Five years ago they got $1.50 a day. Naturally wash day is an expensive day there. But now women everywhere are learning of a wash-day worker that only costs a nickel. Easy Task laundry soap does half the work all by itself, saves money, saves time, saves fuel, saves health and saves clothing. Many women say it solves the servant problem.

Rainbow Gold

By Temple Bailey

Copyright, 1916, by Associated Literary Press

The dimness of the big drawing room was slightly lessened by the glow of the light through the perforations of the samovar. Evelyn Herick was pouring tea for the guests.

"I had a letter from Christine this morning," she said as she handed a cup to Bruce McKenzie.

"What did she say?" he asked, eagerly.

"Wait until these people go," she murmured, "and then I will read it to you."

It was an hour before the crowd melted away, and even then they were not alone, for Philip Herick lounged on the couch in the corner. Evelyn read the note in an undertone.

"I am coming home, Evelyn. After all these years of study my pot of gold at the end of the rainbow, and Bruce would tell me that no one ever really found rainbow gold! All these years I have been seeking a thing that did not exist, and you have stayed at home and have found happiness. I often think of you and Bruce and of the friendship that has grown up between you. Something you said in your last letter makes me feel that you two are about to enter upon a deeper relationship than friendship, and I wish you happiness, I who have missed happiness in my search for rainbow gold."

Bruce and Evelyn looked at each other. "You see, she knows," Evelyn said at last.

From out of the shadows Philip Herick asked, "Has she lost her voice?"

"Yes," Evelyn told him, "her beautiful voice, and she gave up everything for it."

She did not say, however, what was in the thoughts of each one of the three as they sat in the dim room. They had all loved Christine, and she had been engaged to Bruce, but feeling the call of her genius, she had chosen a career rather than marriage. And now Evelyn and Bruce were engaged and Christine was coming back. Behind the samovar Evelyn whispered to her lover, "I am afraid."

"Of what?" he demanded.

"That when she comes back you will find that you have not forgotten her."

He shook his head. "She did not love me, and now I know that I did not love her—not in the way that I love you, Evelyn."

Their voices after that sank into a murmured monotone. The darkness gathered, and the man on the couch, looking through the parted curtains, could see the stars. He thought of the girl who was coming back, when she had gone away she had been radiant with hope and beauty. She had been courted by a dozen admirers. And she was coming back, a failure, coming back to find her lover ready to marry another woman.

His heart ached for her as it had never ached for himself. His own love had been hidden that she might not be hurt by seeing it, but through all the years there had been for him no other woman.

And even as he thought of her she came, parting the curtains softly and standing there in the dimness before them of their own savior.

She laughed a little as she came toward them, and they jumped to their feet in startled amazement.

"You didn't expect me so soon?" she asked, and kissed Evelyn and gave her hands to Bruce and to Philip. She had lost some of her beauty. She was paler and thinner, and the light was gone from her eyes. She gave a little tired sigh as she dropped into the chair that Philip had placed in front of the fire for her.

"How good it seems to be with you all again," she said, "the three dear people with whom I played as a child."

Presently she went on, "And now Evelyn is going to marry Bruce, which is as it should be. I have come back to give you my blessing."

The word was said lightly, but Philip, watching her, saw the trouble in her face. Did she still love Bruce? Would this marriage make him still more unhappy?

"Was I went away," she said after a silence, "I thought that my return would be a triumphal entry. Everyone would want to hear me sing—and now no one will come to hear me."

Philip sank down on the fur rug in front of her. "Is it all gone, dear voice?" he asked softly.

"I still have a little voice," she said, "but no one cares to hear it."

And again there was silence. There was constraint, too, in the atmosphere, for Bruce and Evelyn had grown used to each other's lives and away from Christine's. Only in Philip's heart was the real welcome that she craved.

She felt this instinctively, and it was her need of him, perhaps, that made her ask later, when the four had talked of many things, "Will you ride back to the hotel with me, Philip? I know Evelyn has a dinner engagement and Bruce will want to stay good-bye to her without us."

Philip insisted upon a stop at a tea room, where they ordered food as an excuse but ate nothing.

They talked of Bruce and of Evelyn and of the coming marriage. Evelyn chose the better part, "Christine," she said, "A woman is only a woman after all, and home-keeping hearts are happier."

He felt that she regretted the loss of Bruce, and tried to comfort her. "I don't believe that you would have been happy with him, Christine," he said.

She looked at him startled. "With whom?" she demanded.

"With Bruce, of course," he said.

"Oh," she laughed, "I did. Did you think—why, Philip, I am glad I gave up Bruce. If I had loved him I could not have given him up. If I had loved him no career could have taken me away from him, and that was why I went away to search for my pot of gold."

She stopped for a moment; then she went on with some hesitation: "There was some one else that I loved, Philip, but I was not light enough or frivolous enough to turn from one man to another. I felt that I must give up Bruce and test my self—but the other man never told me, Philip, that he cared."

Something in her voice made him look at her startled.

"Would you have given up your career for that other man?" he demanded.

"Yes," she said softly. "I would have been glad to have used my voice for love songs and lullabies, Philip. I knew that I was following a phantom, that my greatest happiness would not come from a career. But I felt that I must go away—because this other man was true to his friend, and because I felt that I must be very sure of myself."

"I could not tell you, you understand," she said, "I did not dream that you cared, and I thought Bruce's life was bound up in you."

"I knew it wasn't," she said. "But that had to be proved, and I am more than glad that I went away, Philip, because I have learned now that love is the greatest thing in the world. I saw so many women over the years living their pitiful little lives—women eaten up by jealousies and enmities and the desire for excitement, and I learned that nothing makes a woman happy but love and a content. All the modern theories, all the advanced arguments can never make me believe anything else."

And then he knew that all his waiting was to have its reward. He told her then, of his dreams and of his life. He wanted her in his life. It seemed to them both, as they went out, that the world had changed, that there was a radiance about the starlighted evening that was a reflection of the radiance within themselves.

As he left her at her hotel, Christine whispered, "I have found my pot of gold, Philip."

"Where?" he demanded.

"At the other end of the rainbow," she said. "At the end that was nearest home, Philip."

WAGON BED CONVERTED INTO DIFFERENT USES

Agriculturist Has Often Found It Hardship to Be Obligated to Buy or Build Number of Vehicles Required on Farm.

A convertible wagon bed which can be changed into five different kinds of bodies for different uses around a farm, without adding to it or taking from it a single piece, has been designed and is undoubtedly the most radical improvement made in farm wagons for a decade, says Popular Mechanics.

In a few minutes it can be transformed from a hay rack into a vehicle for carrying live stock, and with equal quickness it can be converted into a vehicle for carrying a large number of passengers who can be provided with comfortable seats along the sides for picnicking, etc.

The remarkable versatility of the new wagon bed is secured by hinged malleable iron plates attached to the sides. These support two folding sections on each side. The strain which is put upon these pieces when heavy loads are placed on the wagon makes it imperative that they should be of strong, dependable material.

RIDDING FARM OF GRASSHOPPER

Favorite Remedy Recommended by Colorado Agricultural College in Arsenic Bran Mash.

(By S. ARTHUR JOHNSON, Colorado Agricultural College.)

In spite of the fact that a great deal of work has been done by experiment stations on grasshoppers, no royal road to control has yet been found. Each attack has to be considered on its own merits and relief sought through the most promising channel.

One of the favorite remedies is arsenic bran mash. This is made by mixing one pound of white arsenic with 25 pounds of bran. The arsenic is so near the color of the bran in the mash that it is not easy to tell when the mixture is well done. To overcome this difficulty, the arsenic may first be collected by adding a little dry paint.

After the bran and arsenic are well mixed they should be moistened with water. Put in just enough to make the particles stick together. This mixture should be scattered where the grasshoppers are.

TILE DRAINS IN CLAY SOIL

The illustration shows heretofore from a bulletin of the Ontario Department of Agriculture and shows how the water table of the soil depends on the location of drains. If in a field that is underlaid three feet deep a number of holes are dug it would be observed after a heavy rain that in those nearest the drains no water would remain. In the hole situated halfway between the drains a C would hold considerable water for a few days.

In a clay in fairly good condition it will be found that the slope of the water table is about 1 foot in 25, in a loam 1 foot in about 33. The illustration represents a clay soil with drains A and B 100 feet apart. Wells are dug 12.5 feet apart. At the end of 48 hours after a heavy rain the water will stand about as indicated by zigzag line, in a gradient of about 1 in 25, and hence will be two feet deeper in the center well than at either drain. Hence if the drains are three feet deep there will be three feet of drained soil over A and B, but only one foot at X. Capillary soil resistance to water flow play an important part in holding the water highest half way between the drains, and the gradient the water stands in their combined strength in clay, hence after this gradient is reached drainage becomes very, very slow, and the water table stands in this irregular shape until lowered by evaporation from the soil and plants. But during the months of April, May and sometimes June, when the rains supply at the surface all the water needed for evaporation, none is drawn from below for this purpose, hence during the early months of growth the water stands as indicated by the dotted line AXB. Consequently root development is hampered at X, as 1 foot of soil is too much. There are two ways to remedy the defect, either to dig A and B deeper or else put a drain at C half way between.

The Institute.

With Colvin on the platform, and Amos Boshwin the chair. The Institute at Springfield. Was a very well affair.

As secretary, Sweeney Felt as grand as any lord. As the doing of the teachers He would solemnly record.

All the week he looked wise, And on Friday wise and gay. The thing that made him gayest Was that Friday was pay-day.

But there's another member, Loved by teachers high and low, Who attended her first Institute. "Less than five hundred years ago!"

And when on Tuesday morning, Her poem she had read, The teachers all began to fear, "Th' applause would wake the dead."

All week the teachers struggled To make speeches loud and long; While the thing they dreaded most Was to face that lea-nest throng.

Their gentle voices trembled, And their words came very slow, As they spoke of many things The teachers ought to know.

At last our little Willie Got a notion to be great. So, for next year's instructor, He did Colvin nominate.

For the welfare of our Institute The teachers have no fear, As Colvin will instruct us In the coming year.

The Institute is over And the good old days are past; All the teachers now are happy, For they're back in school at last.

Newspaper Space.

Every line in a newspaper costs the publisher something. If it is to benefit some individual, he may fairly expect to pay something. You do not go into a grocery and ask the proprietor to hand you out ten pounds of sugar for nothing, even though the grocer may be a personal friend and even though the gift might not be a large one.

If the beneficiary of advertising does not pay for it, the proprietor has to settle the bill. Nevertheless, many people cannot seem to learn that a newspaper pays its expenses by renting space, and that it is just as much entitled to collect rent for every day that space is occupied as the landlord is for the house he rents to a tenant.

Most newspapers always treat religious and philanthropic enterprises liberally, and in spite of this many of these enterprises expect the newspapers to give them space, rent free, while they carry their job printing to some other shop. The place for them to look for support is the place they patronize.

Religious organizations, we are sorry to say, are the worst offenders in this line that we have to deal with. We believe that there are just as good Christians, and just as generous, as the average merchant on the street. We, therefore, cannot understand why we are repeatedly besought to give away our goods by people who would never think of begging cream from the milkman or coffee from the grocer.—Glasgow Times.

MERRY MOMENTS FOR EVERYBODY

PROGRAM OF ENTERTAINMENT
ARRANGED FOR KENTUCKY
STATE FAIR VISITORS.

ENGAGE BEST FREE ATTRACTIONS

"Pioneer Days in Kentucky" Will Be
Crowning Feature of the Pyrotechnic Display Each Night.

American people must have amusement and no set of men recognize the fact better than the officers and managers of the Kentucky State Fair. The round of pleasure at the eighth annual state fair, to take place in Louisville, September 27-17, will be an nearly continuous and complete as it is possible to make it.

Secretary J. W. Newman has this season paid particular attention to what may be described as the purely amusement features for the forthcoming season. The fair will be completely closed with United Fairs Booking Co. to supply "The Pass" with the most novel and up-to-date attractions that could possibly be assembled. The usual precautions have been taken to insure the correct moral tone and cleanliness of the individual shows.

This amusement feature will on such a large scale this year that it was found necessary to enlarge the area heretofore utilized as "The Pass," and that their famous avenue of mirth will be arranged in the shape of a monster crescent, with every inch of space along the avenue occupied by some new amusement concession.

The list of "free attractions" is a splendid one. These offerings of the fair management proved so popular last year that care was taken this summer to close contracts with the best offerings the amusement market had to present. A star feature will be the Wabasha Japanese troupe, consisting of a dozen or more tumblers and jugglers from the Land of the Rising Sun. "The Japs" will compete with Madam Louise's Monkey Show, Fink's Treble Moles, Morris and Morris, Expert Tumblers, and Slackey and Briddle, High Wire Artists.

Davenport's Fancy Horses are expected to collect the highest honors, however, among the free attractions. This entertainment is nothing short of a three-ring circus, which will be presented each afternoon and evening.

The acme of spectacular display will be enjoyed each evening in the fireworks exhibition. A contract has been made with the world-famous Pain, and that noteworthy is now at work on a program especially for the Kentucky State Fair. The feature of the fireworks display each night will be an original pyrotechnic production entitled, "Pioneer Days in Kentucky." It is said that the services of over 125 men and women will be required to properly present the spectacle.

In addition to the features already described, there will be the races by day and night. Negotiations are also under way with owners of other Religious enterprises, and it is probable that the list of special attractions will be largely increased before the opening of the gates of the 1910 fair.

Took All His Money.

Often all a man earns goes to doctors or for medicines, to cure a Stomach, or for the medicine King's New Life Pills would quickly cure at slight cost. Beat for Dyspepsia, Indigestion, Biliousness, Constipation, Jaundice, Malaria and Debility. 25c at Haydon & Robertson's.

Free Sample For Baby's Ills

Something can and must be done for the puny, crying baby, for the child that refuses to eat and is restless in its sleep. And since the basis of all health is the proper working of the digestive organs, look first to the condition of the stomach and bowels.

A child should have two full and free movements of the bowels a day. This emptying of the bowels is very important, as with it comes a clear head, a lighter step, good appetite and sound sleep. But it is equally important to the child's health that the bowels be kept free of constipation and indigestion. Children are too strong and stout and other purgatives are not only too harsh for their tender systems, but cause of their bad taste. Have you ever tried Chamberlain's Cough Syrup? It is a liquid tonic that families have been using for a quarter of a century.

First of all, if you have not yet used a sample bottle free of charge, in this when you try it before buying. Later, when you are convinced of its merits, you can order your druggist at fifty cents and a bottle of Chamberlain's Cough Syrup, as well as that of Mr. A. P. Johnson of Walnut Grove, Tenn. state that it is the one family necessity next to food itself. If you are unfortunate enough to have a sickly child, one given to constipation and indigestion, you should send for a free sample of it.

Dr. Caldwell personally will be pleased to give you any medical advice you may desire for yourself or family pertaining to the bowels. Send for a free sample and free of charge. Explain your case in a letter, or write to Dr. Caldwell for details. For the free sample simply send your name and address to a post office box elsewhere. For other request the doctor's name is Dr. R. M. Caldwell, 2300 Caldwell building, Monticello, Ill.
